A Real Life Journey To The Titanic

Thursday, April 12 by Julie Brown

Ohh Tweet 0 0

Meet Masayo Goto. On the 9th July, 2005, Masayo embarked on an underwater adventure, 3.8 kilometres deep to the shipwreck of the Titanic.

Starting at Newfoundland on the east coast of Canada, boarding the Russian ship Academic Kildish (featured in James Cameron's film Titanic) Masayo was given an intensive briefing on the experiences to be expected as a passenger of the 7.8 meter submersible that would take her to the bottom of the ocean and to the Titanic shipwreck. A long, dark, two hour journey to the bottom of the Atlantic ocean, and the submersible had reached the Titanic. Then a six hour tour around the actual shipwreck allowed for one memorable experience!
